

ROBOMISSION ELEMENTARY AGE GROUP – SURPRISE RULE

The domestic chicken is commonly considered to be a particularly stupid animal, but this perception is far from reality. Since it is one of the most widespread livestock animals, it is often kept in very poor conditions, and in such cases, it has no chance to adopt a lifestyle suitable for its species or to learn. However, when kept in more natural conditions, it can be observed that they are very capable of learning. Their abilities related to foraging and other survival situations make them extremely resilient and easy to keep. Moreover, some individuals can even be trained to solve complex tasks and can be completely tamed to humans.

Task:

Gather two treat bio-feed mixes made from natural ingredients to encourage chickens to learn more enthusiastically!

1. Starting position: The two bio-feed mixes start from the area of the upper left feed dispenser (orange area).
2. Goal: The treat feeds should be partially in the chicken target area.

Points:

- One bio-feed mix: 10 points
- Two bio-feed mixes: 20 points
